

12th February, 2009 – 3:30pm / BING

Bing is our curator's Ann's sister. It would be wise to go to Antique early.

A familiar and yet a different person walked in. The eyes were the same; the gait was very different. I had better do exactly what Ann told me to do because she was going to tell Ann tonight.

Their grandmother's funeral took place over the weekend in Shanghai. Bing's grandmother had come from a middle class family. When she was a young woman, she was a member of a resistance group against Japanese occupations. There, she met Bing's grandfather. When the resistance group wanted these two young people to move to another province, her father would not let her move alone, unless she was married. And so, they were married.

Now, at last, I know where Ann's revolutionary traits are from.

(Gina Wong / LiTa)